CH11-2 · 原书293页 The exposition up to this point may have appeared to some readers to have been a series of fragments, in which the various aspects of the attack on the castled king have been closely looked at but which still need to be combined into a whole. However, it was essential first to collect together as much knowledge as possible about the various elements of the attack on the castled king, then to get to know the main principles of defence against this attack, and only after that to begin to bring everything together in this chapter, which is devoted to the temporal aspect or phases of the attack on the castled king. The temporal aspect here is naturally a framework for the points we wish to make, which rest on the following basic theses, already fairly well elaborated in earlier chapters.	CH11-2 · 原书293页 有些读者可能觉得，前面的论述是一系列片段，虽详细考察了攻击已易位王的各个方面，却仍须整合为一个整体。不过，我们确实必须先尽可能掌握这种进攻各种要素的知识，再了解主要防御原则，然后才能在本章中把一切结合起来。本章讨论的是攻击已易位王的时间进程，也就是各个阶段。时间进程自然只是组织论点的框架，我们要说明的观点，建立在前几章已相当充分阐述的以下基本命题上。
CH11-3 · 原书293页 1) An attack on the castled king cannot be successfully carried out on the basis of the attacker's wishes or ‘brilliance’ alone, but the essential conditions for it must also be present.	CH11-3 · 原书293页 1）攻击已易位王，不能只凭进攻者的愿望或“才华”就取得成功，还必须具备必要条件。
CH11-4 · 原书293页 2) These preconditions may be fulfilled to a greater or lesser degree, and the attacker's game must adapt itself accordingly.	CH11-4 · 原书293页 2）这些先决条件的满足程度有高有低，进攻方必须相应调整自己的行棋。
CH11-5 · 原书293页 3) The degree and type of these preconditions accurately determines the extent of the commitments which the attacker can undertake without harm; thus there is a logical and reciprocal relationship between preconditions and commitments, and by this the actual phase which the attack has reached can be recognized.	CH11-5 · 原书293页 3）先决条件的程度和类型，准确地决定了进攻方能够无害地承担多大程度的投入与约束。因此，先决条件与投入之间存在合乎逻辑的相互关系，由此可以辨认进攻实际处于哪个阶段。
CH11-6 · 原书293页 The proposition of these theses, which will be illustrated in later examples, leads us first of all to a brief discussion of preconditions and commitments.	CH11-6 · 原书293页 这些命题将在后面的例子中得到说明。提出它们之后，首先需要简要讨论先决条件与投入。
CH11-7 · 原书293页 Types of preconditions	CH11-7 · 原书293页 先决条件的类型
CH11-8 · 原书293页 Preconditions are naturally contained in the position itself, whether in the attacker's territory or his opponent's.	CH11-8 · 原书293页 先决条件自然蕴含在局面本身，既可能在进攻方阵地，也可能在对手阵地。
CH11-9 · 原书293页 The attacker, for instance, may have his pieces strongly deployed in the vicinity of the enemy king position or aimed in that direction, and it may also be that the general mobility of his pieces or his advantage in space assists him in attacking.	CH11-9 · 原书293页 例如，进攻方子力可能有力地部署在敌王附近，或指向那里；也可能是子力整体机动性较好，或空间优势有助于进攻。

CH11-10 · 原书293页 At the same time, there must be some deficiencies in the defender's camp; the chief of these is the vulnerability of the king position, either through weaknesses in the pawn structure or because pieces are misplaced in relation to the castled position, being overburdened by obligations to cover squares on other parts of the board.	CH11-10 · 原书293页 同时，防守方阵地必须存在某些缺陷，主要是王的位置容易受攻击：或者兵形有弱点，或者棋子对王城而言位置不当，因为它们忙于保护棋盘其他地方的格子，负担过重。
CH11-11 · 原书294页 These and similar preconditions should generally be fulfilled at the first or initial phase of the attack, but it may also be that they can be created by force at this stage, e.g. by the provocation of weaknesses.	CH11-11 · 原书294页 这些及类似先决条件，一般应在进攻的第一阶段，也就是起始阶段具备；不过，也可以在这个阶段用强制手段创造，例如诱使对手产生弱点。
CH11-12 · 原书294页 The second phase of an attack can follow a wide variety of courses. It may be a question of a quick attack leading to mate, usually by means of a sacrifice, and in this case it is naturally unimportant to talk of further preconditions. However, if the attack is slower or does not have an uncompromising character, the second phase is usually concerned with the creation of further conditions as guarantees of success. The following are among the most important operations at this stage: the provocation of further weaknesses; the exclusion of one's opponent's counterattack or its suppression; control of the centre; restraint against a central counter-thrust by one's opponent, and so on.	CH11-12 · 原书294页 进攻的第二阶段可能以多种方式发展。有时通过弃子迅速将杀，此时自然不必再谈进一步的先决条件。但如果进攻较慢，或并非孤注一掷，第二阶段通常就要继续创造条件，以保证成功。这个阶段最重要的行动包括：诱出更多弱点，排除或压制对手反击，控制中央，遏制对手中央反突破，等等。
CH11-13 · 原书294页 The third phase of an attack is of course characterized by the execution, either in the form of mate, of obtaining a decisive material advantage, or of being able to call off the actual attack on the king and obtain a positional advantage or favourable ending.	CH11-13 · 原书294页 进攻的第三阶段，自然以兑现成果为特点：或者将杀，或者获得决定性的子力优势，或者结束直接攻王，转化为局面棋优势或有利残局。
CH11-14 · 原书294页 Types of commitment	CH11-14 · 原书294页 投入的类型
CH11-15 · 原书294页 To the above-mentioned types of preconditions necessary for an attack there also correspond various types of commitment which the attacker can, and indeed must, enter on, if he is going to attack.	CH11-15 · 原书294页 与上述进攻必要条件的各种类型相对应，进攻方为了发动攻击，也可以，而且确实必须，承担各种投入及其约束。
CH11-16 · 原书294页 The commitments which correspond to the first phase are, of course, minor ones, usually a question of tempi. A player, for instance, spends a tempo improving his prospects for an eventual attack, transferring a piece from one side of the board to the other or the like; admittedly, the degree of commitment involved is not great, but it can become significant if the attack on the king is never carried out. It is natural that contemporary masters, in an era of precise opening play, aim first of all at sound moves, which give nothing away to their opponents and constantly strengthen their general positional build-up; the result of play according to this recipe on both sides is that a drawn position is reached. It should also be said that Alekhine [note 1] knew how to instil a little aggressiveness into his moves even in the opening and create some conditions for attack with a minimum of commitments. This is precisely where his skill lay, and it is this which is lacking in many masters.	CH11-16 · 原书294页 第一阶段相应的投入当然较小，通常只是时间。例如，花一步改善未来的进攻前景，把棋子从一翼调到另一翼，等等。投入程度固然不大，但如果攻王始终未能实现，它也可能变得重要。在开局行棋精确的时代，当代大师自然首先追求稳健着法，不给对手机会，持续加强整体布局；双方都按此行棋，结果就会达到和棋局面。还应指出，阿廖欣【注1】即使在开局，也懂得使着法带上一点攻击性，以最小投入创造一些进攻条件。他的本领恰在于此，而许多大师恰恰欠缺这一点。
CH11-17 · 原书294页 · 纳恩编者注 [Nunn's note 1] and Kasparov!	CH11-17 · 原书294页 · 纳恩编者注 【纳恩注1】还有卡斯帕罗夫！

英文校订稿	中文初译稿
CH11-18 · 原书295页 A somewhat greater degree of commitment is entailed in the second phase. It may be a question here of a sacrifice accompanied by considerable compensation, of the dislocation of a number of pieces, or, in particular, of the advance of the wing pawns, which as a rule represents a fairly far-reaching positional commitment. Still, in this phase too the sensible player aims to conduct his game with a minimum of commitments, unless he is undertaking an uncompromising mating attack that is certain to succeed. It is especially important that the attacker should avoid a pattern of thinking whereby an unclear attack is reckoned as part of his compensation. For instance, he may sacrifice a knight for two pawns and an ‘attack’; when that ‘attack’ peters out, his reckoning naturally falls to the ground.	CH11-18 · 原书295页 第二阶段需要较大的投入：可能是具有充分补偿的弃子，可能是若干棋子偏离原位，尤其可能是翼兵推进，后者通常意味着影响深远的局面约束。不过，即使在这一阶段，理智的棋手仍会尽量减少投入，除非正在进行必定成功、不容退让的将杀进攻。尤其要避免把尚不明确的攻势算作补偿。例如弃一马换两兵和“进攻”，等这个“进攻”消退，原先的算盘自然就落空了。

CH11-19 · 原书295页 Assessment of preconditions and commitments	CH11-19 · 原书295页 评估先决条件与投入
CH11-20 · 原书295页 One of the attacker's most important tasks is assessing the extent to which the preconditions for an attack are present and the degree of commitment which may be incurred. The following positions provide examples of this task.	CH11-20 · 原书295页 进攻方最重要的任务之一，是评估进攻条件具备到什么程度，以及可以承担多大投入。以下局面提供了例子。

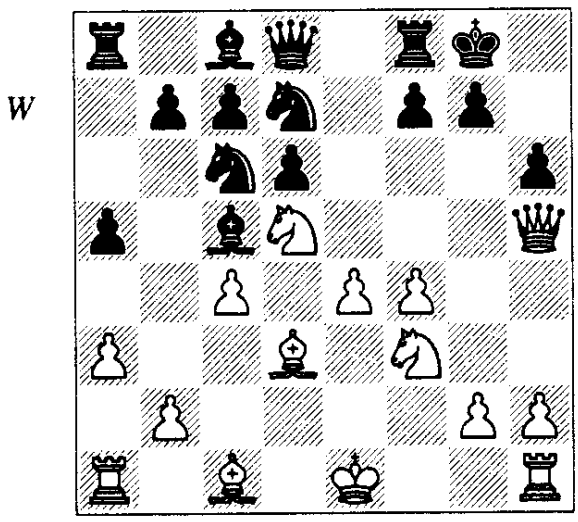

鲍特维尼克—切霍韦尔，莫斯科，1935年，白先。

AA-p295-fig01 · 原书295页

CH11-21 · 原书295页 This position is from the game Botvinnik-Chekhover, Moscow 1935. It is White's move, and he has to decide on how to pursue what is already a promising initiative. He has the upper hand in the centre, a strong knight on e5, and well-placed bishops; all these factors together mean that he has some of the preconditions for an attack on the king, without yet having entered on any commitments. He can therefore be said to be on the threshold of the first phase and must consequently look for further moves which will prepare an attack, while committing himself as little as possible. Thus, it would clearly be out of the question to make a pawn advance with h3 and g4, since Black would then find it easy to parry the main threat, after which White would be left only with pawn weaknesses, to say nothing of the dangers which would arise on the diagonal a8-h1.	CH11-21 · 原书295页 此局面来自鲍特维尼克—切霍韦尔，莫斯科，1935年。白先，必须决定如何继续发展已有的可观主动权。白方中央占优，e5马强大，双象位置良好；这些因素结合起来，说明已经具备一些攻王条件，却尚未承担任何投入。因此可以说，他刚到第一阶段的门槛，应寻找继续准备进攻、同时尽量少作承诺的着法。显然不能h3、g4推进兵，因为黑方很容易挡住主要威胁，此后白方只剩兵弱点，更不必说a8-h1斜线上将出现的危险。

CH11-22 · 原书296页 A slightly lesser degree of commitment would be entailed by White's manoeuvring his a1-rook to h3 via e1 and e3, but it can be shown that such a displacement of the rook would in fact be premature; Black could easily parry the threats involved and then himself prepare for the counter-thrust ...b5 (e.g. by ...Nf8 and ...Rac8) thereby opening up the c-file, over which the white rook on h3 no longer has any influence. Because of this Botvinnik decided on a third plan, which involved the least degree of commitment; this consisted of transferring the c3-knight via d1 and f2 to h3 and thence on to g5. Admittedly, there is a definite commitment here too — in the shape of the number of tempi used; however, Black cannot really take advantage of this, and there is the additional point that the threat posed by the position of the knight on g5 is quite genuine and cannot be easily parried. Now here is the course that the game took:	CH11-22 · 原书296页 把a1车经e1、e3调到h3，投入程度稍小，但也可以证明，这种车的转移实际上过早。黑方很容易挡住威胁，再例如以...Nf8和...Rac8准备...b5反突破，打开c线；h3白车对此便毫无影响。因此，鲍特维尼克选择了投入最小的第三个计划：c3马经d1、f2转到h3，再进入g5。诚然，这也要付出若干步，但黑方无法真正利用这点时间；而且马在g5的威胁是实实在在、难以轻易化解的。实战过程如下：

CH11-36 · 原书297页 This position arose in the game Alekhine-Gilg, Semmering 1926. It is White's move, and he decided on an attack, although the preconditions were only partially fulfilled. Black's king position is weakened and some of White's pieces are well placed, but there is as yet no communication between his rooks. Meanwhile, it is of decisive importance that Black is able to launch a counterattack based on his control of d4 and the exposed position of the white king; the general instability in the centre is also to Black's advantage. We shall see how Alekhine's attack came to grief in this position. 格利戈里奇—科斯蒂奇，萨格勒布，1947年，白先。

CH11-45 · 原书298页 This position is from the game Gligorić-Kostić, Zagreb 1947. White was afraid that, if he allowed ...cxd4 cxd4, he would not be able to maintain his backward pawn at d4, so he played 1. d5 exd5 2. Bxd5, intending to support the centralized bishop on d5, if necessary, by c4.	CH11-45 · 原书298页 此局面来自格利戈里奇—科斯蒂奇，萨格勒布，1947年。白方担心，若允许...cxd4 cxd4，就守不住d4落后兵，于是1. d5 exd5 2. Bxd5，准备必要时以c4支持中央d5象。
CH11-46 · 原书298页 However, this is not a good plan, since it leaves White with an inflexible position as well as the danger of an inferior endgame. On the other hand, the backward d-pawn is not a great drawback, as long as White strives to obtain compensation in an attack on the king. The preconditions are in fact there, for Black's position has been weakened by ...h6, and White can rapidly post his queen and bishop on the b1-h7 diagonal and so force a further weakness in the shape of ...g6. It should also be noted that Black has no minor pieces on the kingside, while his knight and bishop on the queen's wing are obviously not suitably placed for defence. In the centre Black can only exchange pawns on d4, while a pawn advance on the queenside is too slow. The preconditions for an attack on the castled king are therefore fulfilled to a considerable measure; White can play for an attack — indeed he must, for otherwise he may well find himself in difficulty over the backward pawn.	CH11-46 · 原书298页 但这不是好计划，因为它使白方局面僵化，并有进入劣势残局的危险。反过来，只要白方努力通过攻王取得补偿，d落后兵就不是什么重大缺陷。条件其实已经具备：...h6削弱了黑方，白方可以迅速将后和象部署到b1-h7斜线，迫使黑方再走...g6，产生新弱点。还应注意，黑方王翼没有轻子，后翼的马与象显然也不适合防守。中央黑方只能在d4兑兵，后翼兵的推进又太慢。因此，攻王条件已在很大程度上满足，白方可以，而且确实必须，争取进攻，否则落后兵很可能给他带来困难。

CH11-55 · 原书299页 The preconditions for a successful attack on the castled king can arise in a number of different ways. Some arise out of the normal process of building up a position; some are created by the player's own moves, which are specifically aimed at such an attack; some occur unnoticed, as it were, in the course of the game; and others are the result of risky or even faulty play by the opponent. Let us leave aside those cases where the preconditions are created ‘unnoticed’ or through faulty play and turn our attention to those whose origin is conscious and calculated. In this connection we are already acquainted with a rule which has few exceptions.	CH11-55 · 原书299页 成功攻击已易位王的先决条件，可以通过多种方式产生。有些来自正常的布局过程，有些由棋手专门针对攻王的着法创造，有些仿佛在行棋过程中不知不觉出现，还有些来自对手的冒险甚至错误走法。暂且不谈“不知不觉”或错误行棋造成条件的情形，转而关注有意识、有计划地创造条件。在这方面，我们已经熟悉一条很少有例外的规则。

CH11-57 · 原书299页 Good posts for one's pieces, spatial advantage, strength in the centre, the security of one's own king — all these are factors of use in an attack on the castled king but which do not commit one to it. Commitment occurs gradually as weaknesses in the castled position are induced and as a flexible central formation is transformed into a fixed one (e.g. when, with pawns at e4 and d4, one plays e5). In other words, weaknesses in a castled position can be full of point if it comes to an attack, but otherwise they may be without significance or even useful to the side which has incurred them, e.g. ...h6 may provide a flight square for the king; or ...g6 may prepare the advance ...f5. Equally, a premature advance in the centre can entail a general positional commitment and so profit the opponent in various ways. More gradual commitments also arise from a regrouping of minor pieces outside the castling area but with the sole aim of attacking the castled king. It is already more difficult when it comes to transferring a rook to the third rank, since this rook will need some time to return and reopen communication with the other one, should the attack not succeed. The engagement of minor pieces in the vicinity of the castling area (e.g. as a result of moving a knight to g5) also involves a heavier commitment in terms of tempi. However, the heaviest commitments are those incurred in an attack carried out with the aid of pawns. Of these the heaviest is usually incurred by advancing the g-pawn, next comes the advance of the h-pawn, while advancing the f-pawn entails the least commitment. Now we have a small graduated scale for the degree of commitment incurred by the various operations which are necessary to create the preconditions for an attack on the castled king; it need not be emphasized, perhaps, that this scale has only a general and approximate validity. Let us now examine the following example from practical play.	CH11-57 · 原书299页 棋子的良好据点、空间优势、中央力量、己王安全，这些因素都对攻王有用，却不会迫使己方非攻王不可。投入与约束是在诱出王城弱点、把灵活中央转变为固定阵形的过程中逐渐产生的，例如e4、d4兵形走e5。换言之，若真正发动进攻，王城弱点可能很有意义；否则它们可能毫无影响，甚至有利于拥有它们的一方，例如...h6给王留下逃格，...g6准备...f5。同样，过早推进中央兵也会造成总体上的局面约束，以各种方式便宜对手。在王城区域之外，仅为攻王而重新部署轻子，也会逐渐增加投入。把车调到第三横线，约束已经更大，因为进攻若不成功，车须花时间回撤，重新联通双车。轻子进入王城附近，例如马跳g5，也意味着更大的时间投入。不过，最大的投入来自兵参与的攻击，其中通常以g兵推进最大，h兵次之，f兵最小。这样，我们便有了一份简略的递增等级，衡量为创造攻王条件而采取各种行动所付出的投入。不必强调，这个等级只能一般而近似地适用。下面看一个实战例子。

CH11-79 · 原书302页 First, the inducement of weaknesses in the castled position. This is an important operation, although it usually forms part of another operation and tends to be limited to one or two moves. It can take the form either of the unprovoked or faulty weakening of the castled position or of the correct advance of a pawn or pawns in front of the king which, because of faulty play later on, results in an appreciable weakness (e.g. when a flight square for the king, originally advantageous, becomes a weakness); then there is the case of the weakness which is enforced early on without any loss of tempo, while on the other hand, there are weak points which arise in the sacrificial whirlpool of the attack's final phase. All these cases show our theme in its wider sense. In the narrower sense, the inducement of weaknesses implies an operation on which the attacker spends one or more tempi with the sole aim of weakening his opponent's castled position in a definite way. An operation of this kind which entails an expenditure of several tempi represents a very real commitment, and so it usually belongs to a stage when most of the conditions necessary for an attack have already been fulfilled.	CH11-79 · 原书302页 首先是诱出王城弱点。这是重要行动，虽然通常包含在其他行动之中，往往只有一两步。可能是对手无端或错误地削弱王城，也可能是原本正确推进护王兵，却因后续错误行棋而形成显著弱点，例如原本有利的逃格变成弱点；还有早期不损失时间就迫出的弱点，以及进攻最后阶段在弃子漩涡中产生的弱点。这些都是广义上的相关情形。狭义的“诱出弱点”，是进攻方专门花一步或几步，以特定方式削弱对方王城。若为此花费多步，投入就很实际，因此通常应在大部分进攻条件已经具备的阶段进行。

CH11-125 · 原书307页 This position is from the game Yates-Takacs, Kecskemet 1927. The preconditions for an attack on Black's king position have been only partially fulfilled; White is hindered particularly by the possibility of a counterattack by Black in the centre or down the c-file. White's prospects would be better if he could succeed in driving away the f6-knight by e5 and then play Ne4. To manage this he must first repulse the black knight from c4, which means sacrificing a pawn. That was just the sort of thing Yates was in the mood for. In the second Black makes a risky experiment, and one of his pawns, wandering lonely among the white pieces on the kingside, remains as a consolation and the germ of the subsequent attack. In the third game the underlying conception of the attack is quite different, its main feature being Capablanca's rational and cautious method of ensuring that every possible means of counterplay on the part of his opponent is first suppressed. CH11-250 · 原书318页 Starting with 21. Rfe1, this is already White's third consolidating move. Before storming the castled position White first of all excludes every prospect of counterplay by Black; a3 is intended particularly to deprive Black's queen of the square b4. This type of preparation for an attack on the king characterizes many of Capablanca's games. Alekhine preferred a different way of restraining counterplay, namely indirectly by means of dynamic blows. Hence the impression of Alekhine's excessive eagerness and Capablanca's exaggerated caution as the characteristics of their styles. In fact everything depends on the specific position; in some cases Alekhine's method is correct, in others Capablanca's.	CH11-250 · 原书318页 从21. One might well consider strengthening the attack even further by 3. h4. However, that is a commitment, and its consequences are not clear. With 3. Rfc1 White goes for play on the c-file, for which the conditions now are fundamentally better than in the position with which we started. On the one hand, White has gained the time to double rooks, and on the other, he has driven Black's knight back to f8, where it is now one tempo further away from the critical square c4, on which it clearly belongs. White owes his advantage here to his 'toying' with an attack on the castled king. The rest of the game is a matter of positional technique, and it could run as follows: 3... Rc8 (if Black allows Rc7, then the threat of a sacrifice on h6 is renewed!) 4. Rxc8 Bxc8 5. Qe1 Bb7 6. Bd2! (if a good ending is White's objective, the dark-squared bishops should be exchanged as soon as possible) 6... Qd7 7. Bb4 Rc8 (or 7... Bd8 8. Ba5, when 8... Be7 fails against 9. Rc7) 8. Bxe7 Rxc1 9. Qxc1 Qxe7 10. Qc3 Qd7 (if 10... Nd7, then 11. Qc7 is decisive) 11. Nd2, and White has a considerable advantage by virtue of his better bishop and more active knight. Black cannot avoid exchanging queens, after which an exchange of knights or of the white bishop for the black knight would eventually leave White with a very favourable ending.

Bd2!（若目标是好残局，应尽快兑掉黑格象）6... Qd7 7. Bb4 Rc8（或7... Bd8 8. Ba5，8... Be7则9. Rc7）8. Bxe7Rxc19.Qxc1Qxe710.Qc3Qd7（10...Nd7则11.Qc7决定胜负）11. Nd2，白方凭较好的象与更活跃的马，拥有很大优势。黑方无法避免兑后；此后兑马，或白象兑黑马，最终都会留下非常有利的残局。

But it is precisely this false union of ideas which was the reason for White's failure to discover the correct path to victory as, after 4... Qf8, he listened to Big Ben chime quarter after quarter while his knight remained suspended in mid-air at e4. It is true that in the diagrammed position there are two factors making up White's advantage: a powerful kingside attack and a favourable knight versus bishop ending (once all the heavy pieces are exchanged). These two elements could only be combined if the attack led to the exchange of the queens and rooks, but the attack can break through without exchanges, and consequently it is beside the point how good the ending is. In fact, taking the pawn on e4 promotes neither White' s attack nor his endgame prospects, but simply gives Black an opportunity of counterattacking along the e-file. CH11-392 · 原书332页 The winning process for White is based on the gradual preparation of the pawn structure on the queenside in readiness for the transition into an ending. In this two factors are decisive: the first is that, besides his knight on f6, Black's queen is also immobilized since it cannot move from e7 because of the need to cover the squares f7 and f6; the second is that Black's pawns are also condemned to stay where they are. Any move on their part leads to Black's losing in the endgame after the manoeuvre Bh7+, Bg6+ and Bxf7+. Accordingly, Black may only move his rook up and down, and even then he is denied the use of the square f8 because of Nh7. Now for the analysis:	CH11-392 · 原书332页 白方取胜的基础，是逐步准备后翼兵形，以便转入残局。有两个决定因素：第一，除了f6马，黑后也不能动，因为须保护f7、f6，无法离开e7；第二，黑兵也都被迫原地不动，任何冲兵都会在Bh7+、Bg6+、Bxf7+调动后导致残局败局。因此黑方只能来回动车；即使如此，也不能到f8，因为有Nh7。现在分析：
