CH8-1 · 原书215页 The Two Bishops	CH8-1 · 原书215页 双象
CH8-2 · 原书215页 It is generally well-known that the relative strength of the pieces is a variable value which can both increase or decrease depending on the arrangement of other pieces and the dynamics of the position.	CH8-2 · 原书215页 众所周知，棋子的相对价值并非固定不变，而会随着其他子力的配置和局面的动态变化而提高或降低。
CH8-3 · 原书215页 The rook and bishop on open lines, the knight established on a weak square - all these factors increase the power of piece activity. The "eternal" knight is such a threatening force that, for the most part, it is equivalent to an extra exchange for the opponent. The unfailing question of amateurs as to which is the stronger - knight or bishop, is met by the stereotyped reply: in one position the bishop is stronger, in another - the knight. It all depends s on what pawn material is on the board, what is its structure and what positions, in the first instance, the pieces, comparative in strength, are occupying. It goes without saying, the position of the other pieces must likewise be taken into account.	CH8-3 · 原书215页 车与象占据开放线，马进驻弱格，都能增强这些棋子的威力。铁马往往威力巨大，足以抵消对手多半子的优势。业余棋手总爱问马和象谁更强，通常得到的回答是：某些局面中象更强，另一些局面中马更强。这取决于棋盘上还剩哪些兵、兵形如何，尤其取决于相互比较的棋子各自占据什么位置；当然，其他棋子的位置也必须考虑在内。
CH8-4 · 原书215页 Among those pieces whose strength increases appreciably depending on the features of the position and the harmony of activity, the two bishops have attracted particular attention since the beginning of the century.	CH8-4 · 原书215页 有些棋子的威力会因局面的特点和子力间的协调配合而显著增强。在这方面，双象自本世纪初以来便格外引人关注。
CH8-5 · 原书215页 In a number of games, according to the positional conditions, the two bishops were able to show themselves as a threatening force, exceeding the power of two other minor pieces and sometimes even a rook and minor piece.	CH8-5 · 原书215页 在许多对局中，双象借助有利的局面条件，展现出超过另外两枚轻子的威力，有时甚至胜过一车加一枚轻子。
CH8-6 · 原书215页 Steinitz, the founder-teacher of positional play, seemed to be carried away with the effectiveness of the harmonious activity of the two bishops and called this "the advantage of the two bishops". The two bishops figure here, as also in many other evaluations, as an abstract positional factor, embodying one aspect of the advantage.	CH8-6 · 原书215页 作为局面型下法的奠基者，斯坦尼茨似乎陶醉于双象协调配合所产生的威力，并将它称为“双象优势”。在这里，以及在许多其他局面评价中，双象被视为一种抽象的局面因素，本身便构成一种优势。
CH8-7 · 原书215-216页 The first to come out decisively against this view was Chigorin. He expounded his views on this question very thoroughly in polemics with Em.Lasker, when the world champion's book Common Sense in Chess was published in 1896. Lasker gave this bold name to a collection of twelve lectures which he had given before an audience of London chessplayers. There is no place here to assess the merits and demerits of this work which, though pretentious, undoubtedly deserves attention. However, we recall it solely in connection with one position, on account of which arose a dispute between Chigorin and Lasker on the question which interests us about the two bishops.	CH8-7 · 原书215-216页 齐果林首先明确反对这一观点。1896年，世界冠军拉斯克的《国际象棋常识》出版后，齐果林在与他的论争中详细阐述了自己的看法。该书汇集了拉斯克在伦敦面向棋手所作的十二次讲座，书名颇有气魄。这里无意评论这本著作的得失；它虽有自负之处，却无疑值得重视。我们提到它，只是因为书中的一个局面引发了齐果林与拉斯克关于双象的争论。
CH8-8 · 原书216页 In the fourth lecture, Lasker chose as the subject of his talk, the opening theme - the Evans Gambit. In particular, he presented the following variation: 1. e4 e5 2. Nf3	CH8-8 · 原书216页 第四讲中，拉斯克讨论了伊文斯弃兵这一开局，并给出如下变化：1. e4 e5 2. Nf3

CH8-10 · 原书216页 Lasker estimated this position, after the possible replies 15... Kf6 or 15 5... c5, in Black's favour, since he has, in his own words, two bishops, excellent development of forces and a strong position.	CH8-10 · 原书216页 拉斯克认为，黑方走15... Kf6或15... c5后局面有利，因为按他自己的说法，黑方拥有双象，出子充分，而且阵地坚固。
CH8-11 · 原书216页 We give Chigorin's objection to this assessment which appeared on 30January 1897 in the■ chess column of the newspaper Novoe Vremya: "By indicating the two bishops, Herr Lasker naturally gives the understanding that the two bishops are superior in strength to the two knights. Consequently, taking into account also the excellent development of forces and the "strong" position, the Black player has a significant advantage over the opponent and every chance of victory. However, the assessment of the position, made by Herr Lasker, in my opinion is totally subjective eand hardly proves to be correct in practice. He e not only does not confirm this, even if only with a superficial analysis of the position, but also explains nothing to the amateur who is interested more in the question: in what way can the two bishops show their "strength" over two knights in the present position, and what role will they play?	CH8-11 · 原书216页 下面引述齐果林对这一评价的反驳，原文刊于1897年1月30日《新时代报》的国际象棋专栏：“拉斯克先生特意指出双象，自然是认为双象的力量胜过双马。那么，再加上出子充分和‘坚固’的阵地，黑方就应当明显占优，并且大有获胜希望。然而在我看来，拉斯克先生对局面的评价完全出于主观，实战恐怕很难证实。他没有提供哪怕粗略的局面分析来支持这一判断，也没有回答业余棋手更关心的问题：在这个具体局面中，双象究竟怎样体现出超过双马的‘力量’，又能发挥什么作用？
CH8-12 · 原书216页 It is interesting that the position reached in Herr Lasker's variation can also be obtained in the practical game. Therefore, being personally y interested in it, I endeavoured to investigate it. But my analysis led to a completely opposite conclusion, i.e. that all the advantages in the position are to be found on White's side. It would hardly be a mistake to say that detailed analysis and practice will prove that Black's position is even irreparable.	CH8-12 · 原书216页 有趣的是，拉斯克先生所给变化中的局面也可能出现在实战中。因此，我怀着兴趣对它作了研究，却得出了完全相反的结论：局面的种种有利条件都在白方一边。我想，详细的分析和实战检验甚至会证明，黑方的局面已经无可挽救。
CH8-13 · 原书216页 Here are some variations. Herr Lasker considers that Black, by playing ... Kf6 or ... c5 on the 15th move, will have all the advantages about which he spoke. Upon the move 16... Bd7, however, White could immediately deprive Black of that strength, which Herr Lasker sees it as; but it is better for White, in my opinion, to carry out his plan by playing c4, Nc3, etc. On other moves for Black: with the king, queen or one of the pawns, White almost invariably fulfils his plan, as also upon the move 16... CH8-49 · 原书218页 It should be added that in practice also "bishop-worshippers" not infrequently deviate from their own principles. Lasker himself, many times and invariably with success, employed the exchange variation of the Spanish Game in which White lets the opponent have the "advantage of the two bishops" from the first opening moves. And though his opponents also included such noutstanding players as s Tarrasch, Janowski, Capablanca and others, the first two of whom were also well-known "specialists with the two bishops", even they could not utilise this force to offset Lasker's extra pawn on the king's flank.	CH8-49 · 原书218页 还应指出，实战中那些“崇拜象”的棋手，也常常偏离自己的原则。拉斯克就多次成功地采用西班牙开局兑换变例，在开局最初几步便让对手获得所谓“双象优势”。他的对手不乏塔拉什、雅诺夫斯基和卡帕布兰卡这样的杰出棋手；前两位还是公认的“双象专家”。即使如此，他们也未能利用双象抵消拉斯克王翼多兵的优势。
CH8-50 · 原书218页 All the same, side-by-side with adherents of Chigorin's view, there are still quite a few prominent players who adopt the standpoint of Steinitz and Lasker and consider that two bishops against two other minor pieces is in itself a positional advantage.	CH8-50 · 原书218页 尽管如此，除了赞同齐果林的棋手之外，仍有不少名手支持斯坦尼茨和拉斯克的看法，认为双象对抗另外两枚轻子，本身就构成一种局面优势。
CH8-51 · 原书218-219页 We have already pointed out that the basis for the birth of the "theory" about the advantage of the two b bishops lies in positions where the joint activity of the two bishops displays a power which considerably exceeds the fighting capacity of two other minor pieces. But, you know, besides such positions there are many others in which two bishops are powerless against bishop and knight or even two knights - this is the first thing. And, secondly, an unprejudiced examination of positions where the power of the bishops increases disproportionately to the harmony of their activity shows that this does not spring from some magical force, as if inherent in the two bishops, but from a favourable combination of a number of positional factors. We turn to a few such examples.	CH8-51 · 原书218-219页 前面已经指出，“双象优势”理论源于这样一些局面：双象协同作战的威力远远超过另外两枚轻子。然而，首先，也有许多局面中双象无力对抗象马，甚至无力对抗双马。其次，若不带成见地分析那些双象因协调配合而威力大增的局面，就会发现，这种力量并非双象与生俱来的某种魔力，而是多种有利的局面因素共同作用的结果。下面来看几个例子。

CH8-150 · 原书224页 With abstract reasoning, one could say that the White knight occupies a splendid position. But the only question worth asking is what concrete benefit can be derived in the present position from his "splendid" knight, which there and then turns out to be almost none v whatsoever, apart from the fact that it cuts off the Black queen from the e3 square.	CH8-150 · 原书224页 抽象地说，白马的位置可谓理想。但真正需要问的是：在这个具体局面中，这匹“位置理想”的马究竟有什么作用？答案是，除了阻止黑后进入e3以外，它几乎无所作为。
CH8-151 · 原书224页 We cannot but recall the words of gold of Chigorin about the fact that the strength of a piece is determined not by its location (static!) but its concrete prospects of action (dynamic!).	CH8-151 · 原书224页 这使我们不禁想起齐果林的至理名言：棋子的力量不由它所在的位置（静态因素）决定，而由它具体的行动前景（动态因素）决定。
CH8-152 · 原书224页 White's only dynamic chance, which he also tries, consists of the advance of the h-pawn, but the miserable position of his pieces, and particularly the king, dooms this plan to failure.	CH8-152 · 原书224页 白方唯一能争取的动态机会是冲起h兵，实战中他也作了这一尝试；但他的子力，尤其是王的位置太差，这个计划注定无法成功。

CH8-160 · 原书224页 Can it be said that Black gained victory due to the "advantage of the two bishops"? Of course not! White lost as a consequence of the many positional weaknesses in his game and the exposed position of his king, stuck in the centre. One can say with confidence that if it were not the opponent's bishop, but his knight, which was placed on d3, then likewise White would not have saved the game.	CH8-160 · 原书224页 能说黑方是凭借“双象优势”获胜的吗？当然不能。白方失败的原因，是自己阵地中存在许多弱点，而王仍困在中心、暴露无遗。可以肯定，即使d3上不是黑象而是黑马，白方同样无法挽救局面。

CH8-161 · 原书224-225页 Thus to the question whether, in evaluating a position, the factor of the presence of the two bishops for one of the opponents should be taken into account as a particular aspect of the advantage, the right reply, in our view, will be - no, it should not.	CH8-161 · 原书224-225页 因此，评价局面时，是否应把一方拥有双象本身视为一项独立的优势？我们的回答是否定的。
CH8-162 · 原书225页 This particular aspect of the advantage does not exist, as does not exist the advantage of the "two knights", ""two rooks" etc. Just as the exploitation of a weak square by the knight, the intensification of activity by the bishops is based on a complex of weak squares or other weaknesses of the position, on the features of a given concrete position as a whole.	CH8-162 · 原书225页 在我们看来，并不存在这样一种独立的优势，正如不存在“双马优势”或“双车优势”一样。马利用弱格才能发挥威力；同样，象的作用增强，也依赖于一组弱格或其他局面弱点，归根结底取决于整个具体局面的特点。
